

ROBERT INESTROZA

Bio

B.1966 in NYC, USA. Based in Nîmes, France. Robert pursued his studies at Emily Carr University, Vancouver and Art Students League, NYC. His subtly surreal figurative painting and sculpture explore the complexities of contemporary culture. Following a career in luxury fashion design, his practice examines social issues of consumerism, the digital world, identity, vanity, technology, civil unrest, and transformation. The layered, moody figurative works draw from past, current and possible future events, myth, pop culture, and art history. His work examines paradoxical human experience in an ever-complex digital and changing environment.

Artist Statement

My practice draws on historical, personal, and contemporary culture to explore identity through the prism of the digital age on our collective human condition. I fuse digital tools with experimental painting techniques to explore themes of identity, social issues and consumerism. Inspired by art history, contemporary culture and fashion, I create works that are at once timeless, modern, and contemplative, where these fields interplay to explore and critique modern societal issues. My work is characterized by a subtle colour palette, and varied application, capturing a moment of fleeting grace or volatile energy. I use layered techniques, digital disruption motifs, and various methods to create a paradox within the work, fusing chaos versus order, fragility versus strength, or ephemeral versus eternal. I believe this reflects the complexities and contradictions of human nature and what connects us all, regardless of power, politics, or status.

Artist’s Statement

My work explores identity and the human condition through the lens of the digital age. By blending digital tools with experimental painting techniques, I address themes of identity, social issues, and consumerism. Inspired by art history, contemporary culture, and fashion, I create pieces that feel both timeless and modern. My work features a subtle color palette and dynamic applications, capturing moments of fleeting grace or intense energy. Through layered techniques and digital disruption motifs, I create a paradox of chaos versus order, fragility versus strength, and the ephemeral versus the eternal. This tension reflects the complexities of human nature and the connections that transcend power, politics, and status.
